

BUILDING POLITICAL POWER

UTLA is leading the fight for public education and respect for educators, working with the support of parents and community to win historic contract victories that have reshaped public education in Los Angeles. The impact of our collective action extends beyond the picket lines and classroom walls. Building political power is key to ensuring that candidates who share our vision and champion policies that prioritize equity, diversity, and inclusivity are elected to office and ready to support:

- Competitive salaries
- Quality healthcare funding that avoids premiums for educators
- Fully staffed schools
- Class size reduction
- Healthy, green public schools
- Equitable school funding
- Equitable and sustainable access to academic opportunities
- Equitable and sustainable access to needed technology
- Safe school climate
- Targeted support for students
- Affordable housing and tenant rights protection

By actively participating in the political process, we can shape policies that address the needs of our students, educators, and communities while holding candidates accountable and demanding transparency, integrity, and a genuine commitment to our shared goals.

PACE is how we leverage our collective voice in the political arena and counter the massive spending we see every election cycle by billionaire outsiders and anti-union billionaires who want to privatize public education.

UTLA Political Action Council of Educators (PACE) collects contributions that are used for legislative advocacy and to help elect allies of education to local and state office.

Contributions to PACE are strictly voluntary and are not tax deductible.

A member may contribute more or less than the amount suggested on this form, or may decide to not make any contribution. This authorization shall remain in force until canceled by written notice from UTLA or by written notice from the member who signed this authorization.
